Two Wood County Dry Law Violators Get Jail Sentence

Two jail sentences, aggregating 11 months in the Wood county jail, one at hard labor, were dealt out last Saturday by Judge Park, at Stevens Point, when Mrs. William Habeck, this city, and Albert Ehlert, Sigel road, pleaded guilty to the charge of selling liquor in violation of the Volstead act. Both started serving their sentences Saturday noon.

Mrs. Habeck was arrested sometime ago after a private detective, employed by the district attorney, testified that he had purchased liquor from Mrs. Habeck at the Grand avenue saloon, which had been run by her husband previous to his being given a ten months jail sentene, upon similar charges, during the spring term of circuit court in this city. Mrs. Habeck was given a six months jail sentence.

Tells of Purchases

At the preliminary hearing, in Judge Pomainville's court, both operators employed by the county to sift out booze violators gave direct testimony in regard to the purchase of the liquor, stating the time the transactions took place, conversations held and the price paid for each drink. Detective Stephens, at the time of the alleged liquor sales, posed as a prospective purchaser of the Habeck saloon.

Albert Ehlert, proprietor of the old Crotteau saloon, Sigel road, was handed a five months jail sentence, at hard labor, after pleading guilty, before Judge Park, to the charges of selling liquor to Detective Stephans during the time the operator was working in this portion of the ounty. Badger Divorces Are On Decrease Statistics Show

(By Associated Press)

Madison, May 21—Contrary to general opinion, divorces are not on the increase—in Wisconsin. For the last two years the divorce list has revealed a falling off. The last figures, recently tabulated by the bureau of vital statistics, are for the year ending Sept. 30, 1922.

In this period 2,084 Wisconsin couples were divorced. In 1921 the number was 2,112, and for 1920 the total was 2,425.

The facts seem to indicate that the former years, high in divorces, marked the aftermath of war when many ill-advised marriages contracted amid the glamor of recruiting and military stress were dissolved in the courts. The later figures indicate a trend back to more normal levels.

Many Causes

In the list of divorce causes, cruel and inhuman treatment holds preferred position, 907 complaints alleging this ground of action. Desertion followed with 421, non-support with 355, and desertion and non-support with 88; while adultery was the cause in 45 cases, and adultery and cruelty in 18. Fraud in marriage was the issue raised in 41 divorces. Drunkenness accounted for 26, and drunkenness and non-support 15. Forty-three were voluntary separations.

Many Alimony Grants

Alimony was asked in 905 cases and granted in 928.

A significant fact was that in far the largest group of cases—959—there were no children; in 186 cases there was one child; in 280 cases there were two children; in 126 cases, three children. In 15 cases the couples had ten or more children.

Where the duration of the marriage was between one and four years, 697 couples were counted, comprising the largest group. Thirty-four couples separated before the first six months of marriage, and 73 in less than one year; while 475 had been married from 10 to 19 years and 87 had held together more than 30 years.

LABOR SHORTAGE REPORTED FROM ALL LOCALITIES

REPORTS FROM INDUSTRIAL CENTERS SHOW THAT SHORTAGE IS CAUSED BY THE RESUMPTION OF OUTDOOR WORK

(By Associated Press)

Madison, Wis., May 21—A "real labor shortage" exists in Wisconsin at the present time due larbgely to the resumption of outdoor work, the state industrial commission reports. Based upon reports of 350 employers and 11 free employment agencies, it finds that the number of farm hands has increased 62 per cent and railroad construction 36.5 per cent.

Few Decreases Noted

In factories the number of employes is seen to have increased 1.5 per cent from March to April, while wholesale and retail trades show an increase of 2.3 per cent. Some decreases were noted in metal and food products groups of factories.

Following is the commission summary for the entire state:

Ashland—There is an increased activity in nearly all lines of industry in this district. Prospects for the summer are good. We are unable to fill the demand for farm help. Farmers are offering from $40 to $55 per month with board and lodging.

La Crosse—There are several large building prospects under way in this city and the demand for construction labor is very good.

Madison—There exists a steady demand for construction laborers, foundry helpers and farm hands. Highway construction work is getting under way.

Shortage in Milwaukee

Milwaukee—Most factories in Milwaukee are looking for more help and have standing orders with the employment office. Unfilled orders at this office call for 151 farm hands, 548 common laborers, 68 machine hands, 47 tool and die makers, etc. Practically the only labor surplus in this city is for clerical work.

Oshkosh—Building trades and textile trades are very active in this city. We also have a great many more calls for farm help than we are able to fill. Highway construction work is taking quite a number of men and there is no unemployment among those who are looking for work.

Racine—The factories of Racine are running their plants conservatively. There appears to be some difficulty in securing materials. A textile factory is being established here by a Milwaukee concern.

All Call for Help

Rhinelander—Summer logging operations are being carried on quite extensively and the demand for general woodsmen exceeds the supply. Logging industry, paper mill, veneer plant and saw mills are operating short-handed. Practically no surplus of workers in any line.

Superior—The movement of iron ore has begun and an increasing number of men are employed on the docks and in the yards. Street improvement work in the city is also beginning.

Wausau—Practically all industrial plants are calling for more help while building construction and highway construction work is also calling for large numbers. Wages have generally been increased within the past month.

Stops Use of Dairy Names on Imitation Products

Madison Wis., May 21—The use of dairy names in connection with imitation dairy products is prohibited from now on in Wisconsin as the result of Governor Blaine's signature of the Freehoff bill aimed at firms selling imitation butter in the state

Under provisions of the new law, sponsored by Assemblyman William A. Freehoff, Waukesha county, "no firm or corporation shall use in any way in connection with the sale of exposure for sale of any substance designed to be used as a substitute for butter, the word "butter," "creamery", or "dairy," or the name or representation of any breed of dairy cattle or combination of such words, or any other words or symbols or combination thereof commonly used in the sale of butter.

Assembly Freehoff explains that this measure is intended as a protection to the dairy industry of Wisconsin which he claims is menaced to an extent by imitation dairy products.

Ships Collide In Fog; Crew Makes Escape

(By Associated Press)

Superior, Wis., May 21—The Steamer E. U. Demmer of the Milwaukee Western Fuel Company went down about thirty miles below Thunder Bay Island following a collision with the Steamer Saturn, according to dispatches received here.

Members of the crew escaped in life boats. The collision occurred in a fog about seven o'clock Sunday morning. The Demmer was on its way to Milwaukee with a cargo of coal. The Saturn suddenly loomed up and ran into the starboard side of the Demmer.

After the crash the Saturn backed away and was lost in the fog. Nothing further has been heard from the Saturn.

Take to Boats

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., May 21—The twenty-seven members of the crew of the Steamer Edward U. Demmer arrived here early today. The crew barely had time to take to the boats before the Demmer went down.

Bow Damaged

Port Huron, Mich., May 21—The steamer Saturn arrived at the mouth of the river here today with her bow badly damaged, the result of a collision in Thunder Bay with the steamer Demmer.

A wrecking boat and lighter stationed at Detroit are enroute here to assist the Saturn.

Road School For County Patrolmen Set For Thursday

Notices were sent out today to the various county road patrolmen notifying them that the annual road school day will be held in this county Thursday, May 24. At this time all road patrolmen of the county will go on a tour of inspection over the various county and state trunk highways in company with officials from county highway commissioner's office and officials from the divisional office of the Wisconsin Highway Commission.

Previous to the tour the patrolmen will gather at the court house when highway officials will give short talks on road maintainance. At nine o'clock the patrolmen and officials will leave in cars for a tour of the highways. During the trip engineers from the highway offices will point out the good and bad qualities of the work on each road traversed. Common dirt, concrete, graveled and all other types of road will be visited on the trip and the patrolmen will be able to gather first hand and correct information upon the care of the different types of roads.

As planned now the caravan will stop off at Vesper for a noon "feed" which will be prepared by members of the state highway commission. After the noon lunch the tour will be continued hroughout other portions of the county.

Prepares Measure to Increase Governor's Pay

Madison, Wis.—Another attempt to complete legislation to provide a salary higher than $5,000 a year for the position of governor will be made at this session of the legislature.

One bill passed both houses at the last session fixing the salary of governor at $10,000. This session one was passed simply providing that the salary can be raised above the $5,000 limit.

By vetoing the last bill, Gov. Blaine pointed out that the two conflict and that one nullifies the other. He did not say whether he opposed raising the salary for the office that he now holds but he intimated that he was not in favor of such a move by stating that the state cannot complete with private interests in paying its officials. He pointed out that a man holding the office of governor gets many things of intrinsic value that could not be obtained in having a position in a private enterprise.

Assemblyman Herman J. Koch, Milwaukee, has prepared another measure which he hopes will be approved by the legislature and the governor which brings about an increase in gubernatorial pay.

CAPTIVES CLAIM BANDITS DISTRUST CHINESE OFFICIALS

ASK MEASURES TO EFFECT IMMEDIATE RELEASE WITH THE EMPLOYMENT OF FOREIGN TROOPS IF NECESSARY.

(By Associated Press)

Shanghai, China, May 21—Dr. H. Martens, a physician returning from a relief mission to the Shantung mountains where fourteen persons are held by the bandits, reported today the consensus of opinion among the captives was that foreign intervention was the only possible means of effecting their release. The bandits, Dr. Martens said, utterly discredit and distrust the Chinese officials and will only deal with foreigners.

To Exclude Chinese

Chevalier Musso, wealthy Italian attorney of Shanghai, one of the captives, wrote saying the bandits still were surrounded by troops. He urged direct negotiations between foreign officials and the bandits, excluding Chinese from the parleys.

Immediate steps should be taken, he added, "otherwise we will be killed. My state of helath is very bad. I await death calmly."

The American Chamber of Commerce of Shanghai has telegraphed the American legation in Peking, urging direct foreign negotiations and asking measures to effect the immediate release of the hostages, with the employment of foreign troops if necessary.

Conditions Terrible

London, May 21—Reports that troops were firing on the Shantung bandits were received today by the diplomatic corps, which immediately drafted a new note to the foreign office asking the Chinese government to reconcile its promises to procure the release of the foreign captives.

As Parliament has not acted on ratification of the presidential appointment of Dr. Wellington Koo as foreign minister, the foreign office is still officially without a head.

Department of Markets Orders All Eggs Candled

(By Associated Press)

Madison, Wis., May 21—Eggs shall be candled and all "mouldy eggs, black rots, mixed rots, blood rings, stuck spots, bloody whites and chick spots or incubated eggs" removed, before packing, is the substance of General Order No. 21 of the Wisconsin Department of Markets promulgated today and effective between June 15th and December 31st of this year and of each succeeding year unless otherwise provided.

The order is designed to avoid the waste in distribution which is alleged to be caused by the failure teo candle eggs before packing them for commercial uses.

The order requires the candling and removal of unmerchantable eggs both before packing and in the case of repacking.

Candling certificates must be attached to each case showing the date of candling. Such certificates expire within ten days, exclusive of the period when eggs are kept in a refrigerated room.

The order applies to lots of thirty dozen in cases such as are customarily used in the state for commercial packing of eggs.

The order does not apply to eggs which have been held in cold storage for forty days and are required by law to be labeled "cold storage eggs."

Start Work on State Road 66; Is in Poor Condition

Work was started last week on state road 66, just east of the Wood county line, where gravel will be used to put the road in a more passable condition. This project was held up for some time owing to the opposition of residents of the town of Plover and Grant who were opposed to graveling as they wanted concrete installed. Upon the notice that the highway officials ould spend the money, which was already appropriated for this project, elsewhere, if the graveling was not accepted, the residents of the two towns decided to accept gravel as a means of improvement.

Following the rain of Saturday the portion of the road where work is now going on is in an almost impassable condition.

Many Alimony Grants

Alimony was asked in 905 cases and granted in 928.

A significant fact was that in far the largest group of cases—959—there were no children; in 186 cases there was one child; in 280 cases there were two children; in 126 cases, three children. In 15 cases the couples had ten or more children.

Where the duration of the marriage was between one and four years, 697 couples were counted, comprising the largest group. Thirty-four couples separated before the first six months of marriage, and 73 in less than one year; while 475 had been married from 10 to 19 years and 87 had held together more than 30 years.

LABOR SHORTAGE REPORTED FROM ALL LOCALITIES

REPORTS FROM INDUSTRIAL CENTERS SHOW THAT SHORTAGE IS CAUSED BY THE RESUMPTION OF OUTDOOR WORK

(By Associated Press)

Madison, Wis., May 21—A "real labor shortage" exists in Wisconsin at the present time due larbgely to the resumption of outdoor work, the state industrial commission reports. Based upon reports of 350 employers and 11 free employment agencies, it finds that the number of farm hands has increased 62 per cent and railroad construction 36.5 per cent.

Few Decreases Noted

In factories the number of employes is seen to have increased 1.5 per cent from March to April, while wholesale and retail trades show an increase of 2.3 per cent. Some decreases were noted in metal and food products groups of factories.

Following is the commission summary for the entire state:

Ashland—There is an increased activity in nearly all lines of industry in this district. Prospects for the summer are good. We are unable to fill the demand for farm help. Farmers are offering from $40 to $55 per month with board and lodging.

La Crosse—There are several large building prospects under way in this city and the demand for construction labor is very good.

Madison—There exists a steady demand for construction laborers, foundry helpers and farm hands. Highway construction work is getting under way.

Shortage in Milwaukee

Milwaukee—Most factories in Milwaukee are looking for more help and have standing orders with the employment office. Unfilled orders at this office call for 151 farm hands, 548 common laborers, 68 machine hands, 47 tool and die makers, etc. Practically the only labor surplus in this city is for clerical work.

Oshkosh—Building trades and textile trades are very active in this city. We also have a great many more calls for farm help than we are able to fill. Highway construction work is taking quite a number of men and there is no unemployment among those who are looking for work.

Racine—The factories of Racine are running their plants conservatively. There appears to be some difficulty in securing materials. A textile factory is being established here by a Milwaukee concern.

All Call for Help

Rhinelander—Summer logging operations are being carried on quite extensively and the demand for general woodsmen exceeds the supply. Logging industry, paper mill, veneer plant and saw mills are operating shorthanded. Practically no surplus of workers in any line.

Superior—The movement of iron ore has begun and an increasing number of men are employed on the docks and in the yards. Street improvement work in the city is also beginning.

Wausau—Practically all industrial plants are calling for more help while building construction and highway construction work is also calling for large numbers. Wages have generally been increased within the past month.

Stops Use of Dairy Names on Imitation Products

Madison Wis., May 21—The use of dairy names in connection with imitation dairy products is prohibited from now on in Wisconsin as the result of Governor Blaine's signature of the Freehoff bill aimed at firms selling imitation butter in the state

Under provisions of the new law, sponsored by Assemblyman William A. Freehoff, Waukesha county, "no firm or corporation shall use in any way in connection with the sale of exposure for sale of any substance designed to be used as a substitute for butter, the word "butter," "creamery", or "dairy," or the name or representation of any breed of dairy cattle or combination of such words, or any other words or symbols or combination thereof commonly used in the sale of butter.

Assembly Freehoff explains that this measure is intended as a protection to the dairy industry of Wisconsin which he claims is menaced to an extent by imitation dairy products.

Ships Collide In Fog; Crew Makes Escape

(By Associated Press)

Superior, Wis., May 21—The Steamer E. U. Demmer of the Milwaukee Western Fuel Company went down about thirty miles below Thunder Bay Island following a collision with the Steamer Saturn, according to dispatches received here.

Members of the crew escaped in life boats. The collision occurred in a fog about seven o'clock Sunday morning. The Demmer was on its way to Milwaukee with a cargo of coal. The Saturn suddenly loomed up and ran into the starboard side of the Demmer.

After the crash the Saturn backed away and was lost in the fog. Nothing further has been heard from the Saturn.

Take to Boats

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., May 21—The twenty-seven members of the crew of the Steamer Edward U. Demmer arrived here early today. The crew barely had time to take to the boats before the Demmer went down.

Bow Damaged

Port Huron, Mich., May 21—The steamer Saturn arrived at the mouth of the river here today with her bow badly damaged, the result of a collision in Thunder Bay with the steamer Demmer.

A wrecking boat and lighter stationed at Detroit are enroute here to assist the Saturn.

Road School For County Patrolmen Set For Thursday

Notices were sent out today to the various county road patrolmen notifying them that the annual road school day will be held in this county Thursday, May 24. At this time all road patrolmen of the county will go on a tour of inspection over the various county and state trunk highways in company with officials from county highway commissioner's office and officials from the divisional office of the Wisconsin Highway Commission.

Previous to the tour the patrolmen will gather at the court house when highway officials will give short talks on road maintainance. At nine o'clock the patrolmen and officials will leave in cars for a tour of the highways. During the trip engineers from the highway offices will point out the good and bad qualities of the work on each road traversed. Common dirt, concrete, graveled and all other types of road will be visited on the trip and the patrolmen will be able to gather first hand and correct information upon the care of the different types of roads.

As planned now the caravan will stop off at Vesper for a noon "feed" which will be prepared by members of the state highway commission. After the noon lunch the tour will be continued hroughout other portions of the county.

Prepares Measure to Increase Governor's Pay

Madison, Wis.—Another attempt to complete legislation to provide a salary higher than $5,000 a year for the position of governor will be made at this session of the legislature.

One bill passed both houses at the last session fixing the salary of governor at $10,000. This session one was passed simply providing that the salary can be raised above the $5,000 limit.

By vetoing the last bill, Gov. Blaine pointed out that the two conflict and that one nullifies the other. He did not say whether he opposed raising the salary for the office that he now holds but he intimated that he was not in favor of such a move by stating that the state cannot complete with private interests in paying its officials. He pointed out that a man holding the office of governor gets many things of intrinsic value that could not be obtained in having a position in a private enterprise.

Assemblyman Herman J. Koch, Milwaukee, has prepared another measure which he hopes will be approved by the legislature and the governor which brings about an increase in gubernatorial pay.

CAPTIVES CLAIM BANDITS DISTRUST CHINESE OFFICIALS

ASK MEASURES TO EFFECT IMMEDIATE RELEASE WITH THE EMPLOYMENT OF FOREIGN TROOPS IF NECESSARY.

(By Associated Press)

Shanghai, China, May 21—Dr. H. Martens, a physician returning from a relief mission to the Shantung mountains where fourteen persons are held by the bandits, reported today the consensus of opinion among the captives was that foreign intervention was the only possible means of effecting their release. The bandits, Dr. Martens said, utterly discredit and distrust the Chinese officials and will only deal with foreigners.

To Exclude Chinese

Chevalier Musso, wealthy Italian attorney of Shanghai, one of the captives, wrote saying the bandits still were surrounded by troops. He urged direct negotiations between foreign officials and the bandits, excluding Chinese from the parleys.

Immediate steps should be taken, he added, "otherwise we will be killed. My state of helath is very bad. I await death calmly."

The American Chamber of Commerce of Shanghai has telegraphed the American legation in Peking, urging direct foreign negotiations and asking measures to effect the immediate release of the hostages, with the employment of foreign troops if necessary.

Conditions Terrible

London, May 21—Reports that troops were firing on the Shantung bandits were received today by the diplomatic corps, which immediately drafted a new note to the foreign office asking the Chinese government to reconcile its promises to procure the release of the foreign captives.

As Parliament has not acted on ratification of the presidential appointment of Dr. Wellington Koo as foreign minister, the foreign office is still officially without a head.

Department of Markets Orders All Eggs Candled

(By Associated Press)

Madison, Wis., May 21—Eggs shall be candled and all "mouldy eggs, black rots, mixed rots, blood rings, stuck spots, bloody whites and chick spots or incubated eggs" removed, before packing, is the substance of General Order No. 21 of the Wisconsin Department of Markets promulgated today and effective between June 15th and December 31st of this year and of each succeeding year unless otherwise provided.

The order is designed to avoid the waste in distribution which is alleged to be caused by the failure teo candle eggs before packing them for commercial uses.

The order requires the candling and removal of unmerchantable eggs both before packing and in the case of repacking.

Candling certificates must be attached to each case showing the date of candling. Such certificates expire within ten days, exclusive of the period when eggs are kept in a refrigerated room.

The order applies to lots of thirty dozen in cases such as are customarily used in the state for commercial packing of eggs.

The order does not apply to eggs which have been held in cold storage for forty days and are required by law to be labeled "cold storage eggs."

Start Work on State Road 66; Is in Poor Condition

Work was started last week on state road 66, just east of the Wood county line, where gravel will be used to put the road in a more passable condition. This project was held up for some time owing to the opposition of residents of the town of Plover and Grant who were opposed to graveling as they wanted concrete installed. Upon the notice that the highway officials ould spend the money, which was already appropriated for this project, elsewhere, if the graveling was not accepted, the residents of the two towns decided to accept gravel as a means of improvement.

Following the rain of Saturday the portion of the road where work is now going on is in an almost impassable condition.

MONDAY NIGHT OPEN LETTER

To: J. A. Cohen, Pres.
Chamber of Commerce.
Wisconsin Rapids.

Dear Joe:—

We have watched with interest your work as president of the Chamber of Commerce. There are some things we don't agree with you on entirely, but that is only due to a difference in viewpoint. Most of our differences are minor ones and not serious, however, we are still wondering why you are taking so much time on the Park project which Al. Normington and the writer proposed. Al. has no desire to have it named Normington Park I am sure and certainly I harbor no desire to see my name on any park. Al. and I have been thinking only about the good times the people could have at such a park as we propose because you know Joe that there is only one real park in the city, Legion Park, more commonly known as Swimming Pool Park. But Joe, not everyone wants to swim. There are a good many who like tennis and baseball and other sports which the proposed park would offer the people.

Knowing that you are as interested to bring benefits to as many people as possible, we surely hope you will put your committees to work to make possible that park.

You are doing a good many fine things as head of the Chamber of Commerce. Your idea of a Booster trip is a splendid idea and if we are not mistaken will create much good will for Wisconsin Rapids throughout Wood County. You have a nice faculty of getting things done and your interest in affairs civic is admirable. As president of the Chamber of Commerce, we congratulate you on all the good things you have done, but we wish you would not forget about the park proposition because that is a very important project for the association to work out and if accomplished will be of great value to the people.

More power to you.

Bill.

A GLOWING EXAMPLE

During the last few years there has been a great change in the public mind with regard to new schools. Everywhere one sees new and improved buildings replacing the shabby, unsafe and unsanitary buildings where the youth of the land receive training.

With all the wonderful advantages which the new and modern school buildings provide the youth of today, we still hear from here and there a distinct opposition to the expenditures of large sums of money for the erection of such building. Summarized the opposition is something like this: "I went to school in the little red school house" or "In my day, a log school with an old stove and nature providing the ventilation was all we had for schools and I guess those of my generation were as good students and as good boys and girls as they are today. 'What was good enough for us is good enough for them.'"

Such a reactionary attitude to the progress of education was obviously the cause of the school house tragedy in Cleveland, S. C., where seventy-six unfortunate people attending a commencement exercise met their death. Although it was a building erected only fifteen years ago, it apparently contained none of the advantages which such a building should contain even though built in 1908. It was a veritable fire trap and proved itself as such.

What was good enough for the children of one or two decades or more ago is not good enough for the children of today any more than the working conditions of ten, twenty or thirty years ago are good enough for those who toil today.

With the school house as a center for community gatherings, its use being multiplied many fold as a plant for use outside of school hours, the present day schools should be the best there are to be had.

Legislature Asked to Repair Lewis Monument

Hohenwald, Tenn.—Several miles from this city in a lonely spot in the woods, off the traveled highways lies the body of Meriweather Lewis, notable historical character of the early days of Tennessee, but whose chief fame is due to the fact he participated in the Lewis and Clark expedition.

A monument erected over the grave by the State of Tennessee, bears the following inscriptions:

Meriweather Lewis, born near Charlottesville, Va., August 18, 1774. Died October 11, 1809, age 35 years.

"An officer of the regular army, private secretary to President Jefferson, commander of the expedition to Oregon in 1803-1806, governor of the territory of Louisiana. His melancholy death occured where this monument now stands and under which rest his mortal remains."

Historians believe that Lewis was killed by robbers.

Surrounding the monument are the remains of an iron fence for which the Tennessee legislature appropriated $500 in 1848. Local tradition says that during the war between the states, soldiers tore away some of the pickets for the purpose of manufacturing horse shoe nails.

The Tennessee Historical Commission plans to ask the legislature now in session at Nashville to appropriate $1,000 for repair, preservation and fencing of the Lewis monument. It has also been suggested that the body be removed to Hohenwald and a suitable monument erected.

Says Majority of Labor Party Are Teetotalers

London.—In proportion to their numbers the members of the Labor Party drink far less than those of any other political party represented in parliament, it was asserted by Dr. Salter, Labor M. P., in an address before the Industrial Christian Fellowship. So many of his party are teetolers, he said that they will soon be called upon to pay more for their meals.

Dr. Salter said in the past few years the Kitchen Committee—that is the committee responsible for the conduct of the refreshments department—had barely succeeded in making both ends meet.

"But the committee now complains," he added, "that the restaurant is being run at a heavy loss. The reason for that is that the great accession in strength to the Labor Party—which now numbers 1444 members—has caused a great falling off in the consumption of alcoholic drinks in the house. Many members who had liberally patronized the bar in the past did not succeed in getting reelected. And of the labor members who tooks their places, three-quarters are total absainers. The contribute practically nothing to the profits of the restaurant. Everybody familiar with the restaurant business knows that it is out of the drinks sold that bulk of their profits are made.

The Kitchen Committee is now considering whether in order to make up for its decreased profits at the bar, it will not be necessary to increase its charges for meals.

THEATRES

IDEAL THEATER—"LORNA DOONE"

In Saturday's "Moviegrams" it was stated that "Lorna Doone" would be shown at the Palace Theater. This was an error, as it will be seen at the Ideal Theater Monday and Tuesday. The picture is given as a benefit for the Woman's Association of the Congregational Church.

Romance comes riding across the screen in picturesque seventeenth century garb in the sumptuous production of "Lorna Doone" which opens at the Ideal theater tonight. From a novel that has been a favorite with three generations, Maurice Tourneur has produced a film that combines the beauty of an old world painting and the thrills of a modern melodrama.

Contrasted with the early scenes of the wild moorland where peasants in quaint homespuns and linseys live under the terrorized sway of the wild outlaw band are vivid glimpses from the magnificent court of King James where "Lorna" is taken in regal style after her rescue by the herculean "John Ridd" from the wicked "Doones." John's fight when he tears a hole through the thatched roof of the banquet hall where Lorna is being forced into marriage with Carver Doone and the big battle when the aroused peasantry burns the Doone village to the ground are two of the most dramatic episodes ever screened.

Madge Bellamy, the new Thomas H. Ince star, is an ideal "Lorna." She bears a striking resemblance to the romantic heroine for whose sake the handsome "John" risks so many perils. In the beautiful costumes which she wears in scenes at the court and Westminister Abbey she might well be mistaken for the model from whom the famous painting of "Lorna Doone" was made.

John Bowers, as the conqueror of the terrible Doones, who murdered his father, surpasses anything he has done in screen characterizations while the most picturesque figure in the play is that of "Sir Ensor Doone," the exiled nobleman who has become the leader of the wild outlaws.

The novel has been screened with an evident disregard for expense for the settings are rarly beautiful while the photography attests the innate artistry of the producer.

SIDELIGHTS ON THE LEGISLATURE

By O. D. BRANDENBERG

Madison, Wis.—Radicals of the legislature would forbid watchman or guards in the employ of detective agencies to be armed with deadly weapons within or near any place of employment where a strike prevails. Probably they would raise no objection if they carried bananas or bologna sausages for billies.

A few days ago Assemblyman D. J. Vincent of Kenosha, retired farmer, visited the federal employment bureau in Madison for the purpose of obtaining two farm hands, and found there just seven of his vocation bent on identically the same errand were there ahead of him, while exactly 263 applications for farm workers were on the register. Mr. Vincent then applied to the federal offices in Milwaukee, Racine and Kenosha, and not a man was available in any of those places. At the same time the Democrat Printing Company inserted a small advertisement in a Madison paper for a night watchman and for the next three days it was turning away men ardent after that "soft snap." Between thirty and forty men, mostly robust and hearty, eagerly were after the position. What's the matter? Obviously there must be a multitude of men in the aggregate in our cities who are willing to work if the work is easy! Assemblyman Vincent, who, with his sons, owns two or three fine farms in Kenosha county, is still short of help!

Gov. Blaine's essay at remodeling Wisconsin's taxing system is doomed to defeat. The essence of his measure is that $6,500,000 be added to income taxes and an equivalent amount removed from taxation on real property. After the decks are cleared of his bill two others fare to the front, one fabricated by Speaker Dahl, the other by Senator Severson. Both have as their motive the wrestling by the state of greater sums from incomes.

Locomotive engineers are favored in a useful particular by a bill introduced by Assemblyman Clinton G. Price of Mauston. It provides that between November 1 and April 1 each year engines must be equipped with cab curtains to make their nooks more cozy in winter. This bill has been signed by the governor. Another measure, also signed, requires "independent or straight airbreak valves on each locomotive of 100,000 pounds.

Unless the governor intervenes by veto, which may not be expected, military drill at the university is certain to gradually fade away into nothingness; for a bill making it optional has passed the assembly and the vote of 18 to 7 by which it has been advanced to a third reading in the senate is clear indication that it will get thru that body also. On the whole it must seem rather unfortunate that this policy is to prevail, because military drill is the best possible means of straightening shoulders and giving to young men in the university an erect, healthful bearing. It has this distinct merit, wholly aside from any militaristic advantage. Such drill promotes discipline, promptitude, neatness of attire and person. Careless, lop-sided, round-shouldered youths need just such attention. For that reason, abolition of compulsary drill is to be regretted. One really cannot conceive exactly what may be substituted for it. No previous Wisconsin legislature could possibly have passed such a bill. I am prone to believe its birth lies in the pacifist spirit, an outgrowth of the war. Just what particular bearing this measure may have with regard to federal aid granted the university may not be known yet. Governor Blaine, I earnestly believe, would exhibit a fine spirit if he should fail to give his approval to this unfortunate inovation.

Senator Kuckuk's bill for a Lincoln memorial day, which passed the senate 16 to 7, on April 13, was assassinated in the assembly on May 16. The best feature of this measure was the requirement that a record be kept in which should be noted all gifts to the public by individuals, firms or corporations. It really was in the nature of a memorial to contemporary benefactors, and this would have the effect naturally of stimulating further gracious acts to the people generally. This bill had been concurred in by the assembly but a reconsideration prevailed, then, despite commendable efforts on the part of assemblymen of vision, the bill was slaughtered, 48 assemblymen voting against it. The purpose was so wholly meritorious that these 48 gentlemen, if catechized, would have much difficulty in offering an acceptable explanation of their conduct. A few names are found in this roll that should not be there, but logically it contains all the ultras in the lower house.

Many years ago Oregon hatched a scheme by which candidates for office could have their pictures and sketches printed at cost in pamphlets published by the state. Wisconsin promptly grabbed the new idea and for about two years this sort of a pamphlet was issued here. But candidates deemed such publicity of little value. They preferred to spend their money in the newspapers of their neighborhoods. Hence, the pamphlets dwindled to absurdly small proportions and finally the legislature repealed the law. Senator Geary of the Janesville district may not have known of this rueful experience else why would he have introduced a bill to revise the old practice? A few days ago happily the senate rejected the proposition, 19 to 12. The only practicable way to render such a pamphlet really useful would be to compel candidates thus to advertise. Then, in a rude volume could be compressed all the promises, all the laudations of all aspirants for public place. But, to leave the matter optional is to assure failure of the scheme.

Assemblyman Bilgrien of Iron Ridge has presented a bill which provides that when the word population is used in connection with a classification of towns, villages, cities and counties for the exercise of their corporate powers, it must not include the inmates of penal institutions, state asylums, or hospitals for the insane, which seems to be entirely reasonable and just.

SIDELIGHTS ON THE LEGISLATURE

By O. D. BRANDENBERG

Madison, Wis.—Radicals of the legislature would forbid watchman or guards in the employ of detective agencies to be armed with deadly weapons within or near any place of employment where a strike prevails. Probably they would raise no objection if they carried bananas or bologna sausages for billies.

A few days ago Assemblyman D. J. Vincent of Kenosha, retired farmer, visited the federal employment bureau in Madison for the purpose of obtaining two farm hands, and found there just seven of his vocation bent on identically the same errand were there ahead of him, while exactly 263 applications for farm workers were on the register. Mr. Vincent then applied to the federal offices in Milwaukee, Racine and Kenosha, and not a man was available in any of those places. At the same time the Democrat Printing Company inserted a small advertisement in a Madison paper for a night watchman and for the next three days it was turning away men ardent after that "soft snap." Between thirty and forty men, mostly robust and hearty, eagerly were after the position. What's the matter? Obviously there must be a multitude of men in the aggregate in our cities who are willing to work if the work is easy! Assemblyman Vincent, who, with his sons, owns two or three fine farms in Kenosha county, is still short of help!

Gov. Blaine's essay at remodeling Wisconsin's taxing system is doomed to defeat. The essence of his measure is that $6,500,000 be added to income taxes and an equivalent amount removed from taxation on real property. After the decks are cleared of his bill two others fare to the front, one fabricated by Speaker Dahl, the other by Senator Severson. Both have as their motive the wrestling by the state of greater sums from incomes.

Locomotive engineers are favored in a useful particular by a bill introduced by Assemblyman Clinton G. Price of Mauston. It provides that between November 1 and April 1 each year engines must be equipped with cab curtains to make their nooks more cozy in winter. This bill has been signed by the governor. Another measure, also signed, requires "independent or straight airbreak valves on each locomotive of 100,000 pounds.

Unless the governor intervenes by veto, which may not be expected, military drill at the university is certain to gradually fade away into nothingness; for a bill making it optional has passed the assembly and the vote of 18 to 7 by which it has been advanced to a third reading in the senate is clear indication that it will get thru that body also. On the whole it must seem rather unfortunate that this policy is to prevail, because military drill is the best possible means of straightening shoulders and giving to young men in the university an erect, healthful bearing. It has this distinct merit, wholly aside from any militaristic advantage. Such drill promotes discipline, promptitude, neatness of attire and person. Careless, lop-sided, round-shouldered youths need just such attention. For that reason, abolition of compulsary drill is to be regretted. One really cannot conceive exactly what may be substituted for it. No previous Wisconsin legislature could possibly have passed such a bill. I am prone to believe its birth lies in the pacifist spirit, an outgrowth of the war. Just what particular bearing this measure may have with regard to federal aid granted the university may not be known yet. Governor Blaine, I earnestly believe, would exhibit a fine spirit if he should fail to give his approval to this unfortunate inovation.

Senator Kuckuk's bill for a Lincoln memorial day, which passed the senate 16 to 7, on April 13, was assassinated in the assembly on May 16. The best feature of this measure was the requirement that a record be kept in which should be noted all gifts to the public by individuals, firms or corporations. It really was in the nature of a memorial to contemporary benefactors, and this would have the effect naturally of stimulating further gracious acts to the people generally. This bill had been concurred in by the assembly but a reconsideration prevailed, then, despite commendable efforts on the part of assemblymen of vision, the bill was slaughtered, 38 assemblymen voting against it. The purpose was so wholly meritorious that these 48 gentlemen, if catechized, would have much difficulty in offering an acceptable explanation of their conduct. A few names are found in this roll that should not be there, but logically it contains all the ultras in the lower house.

Many years ago Oregon hatched a scheme by which candidates for office could have their pictures and sketches printed at cost in pamphlets published by the state. Wisconsin promptly grabbed the new idea and for about two years this sort of a pamphlet was issued here. But candidates deemed such publicity of little value. They preferred to spend their money in the newspapers of their neighborhoods. Hence, the pamphlets dwindled to absurdly small proportions and finally the legislature repealed the law. Senator Geary of the Janesville district may not have known of this rueful experience else why would he have introduced a bill to revise the old practice? A few days ago happily the senate rejected the proposition, 19 to 12. The only practicable way to render such a pamphlet really useful would be to compel candidates thus to advertise. Then, in a rude volume could be compressed all the promises, all the laudations of all aspirants for public place. But, to leave the matter optional is to assure failure of the scheme.

Assemblyman Bilgrien of Iron Ridge has presented a bill which provides that when the word population is used in connection with a classification of towns, villages, cities and counties for the exercise of their corporate powers, it must not include the inmates of penal institutions, state asylums, or hospitals for the insane, which seems to be entirely reasonable and just.

First Photographs of the School Fire That Killed 76 at Cleveland, S. C.

Smoking Ruins Where School Victims Died in Fire

First picture taken at the scene of the South Carolina tragedy after bodies of 76 persons had been taken from the smoldering debris. Complete destruction of the schoolhouse is shown, only a few piles of bricks remaining.

Awaiting a 40-foot Grave

Some of the shrouded dead lying in the cemetery after the schoolhouse fire at Cleveland, S. C., most of the bodies being buried in one big community grave measuring 40 feet.

"Topsy Turvy," schoolroom comedy, became a grim tragedy when 76 men, women and children, lost their lives in the fire that swept the little Cleveland, S. C., schoolhouse while commencement exercises were being held.

Two acts of the play had been presented. The audience, consisting of proud mothers, fathers, relatives and friends, was chatting happily about the success of the performance. Backstage the young student actors were receiving the congratulations of their teachers and principal. They were all ready to go with the big scene.

Suddenly one of the oil lamps fell and smashed on the floor of the improvised stage. As it exploded, blazing kerosene splashed on the crowd. Flames licked the flimsy props and the curtains that served as scenery. Child actors tried to stamp them out. But the fire spread too rapidly.

In a twinkling there was a rush for the door—the only way out.

Some succeeded in getting through the narrow hall and down the wooden stairs. But as the crowd jammed on the landing, the weight became too great and the stairs collapsed.

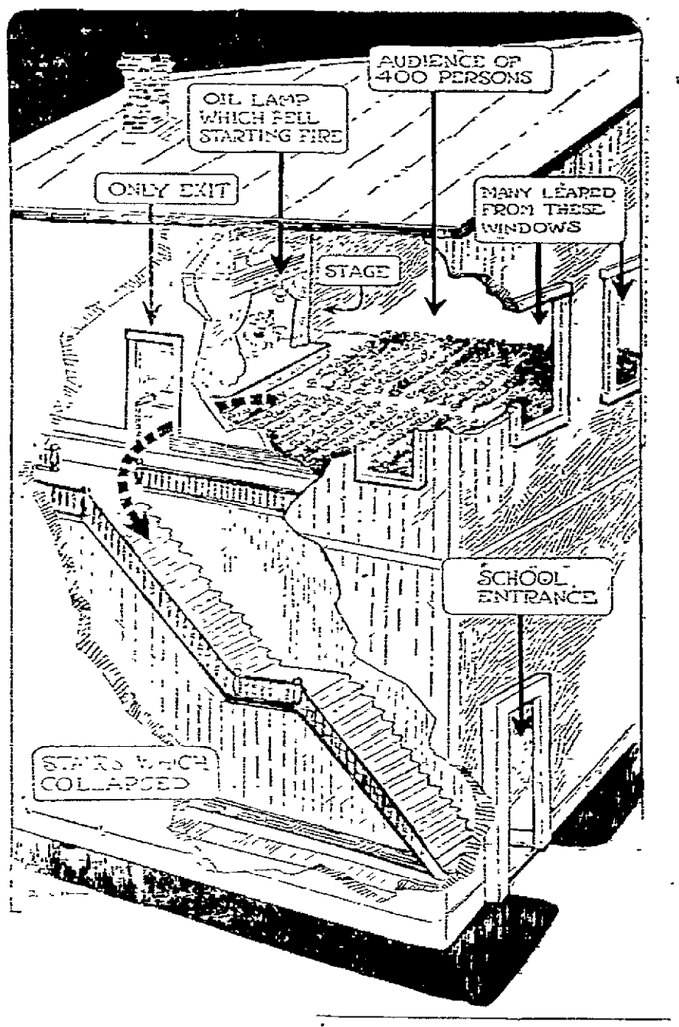
Some were impaled on the jagged bits of banister left standing; others were crushed by the bodies of those falling on top of them; most were burned.

A few leaped from the second-story windows. But most of those who perished were trapped in the rooms where they sat.

Efforts of those who escaped to aid those still in the building were, for the most part, fruitless. Several fathers who reached the open and returned to seek their children who had been on the stage, were burned to death trying to rescue them.

How Fire Occurred

DIAGRAM BY ARTIST E. R. HIGGINS



Boy Mourner With His Shrouded Dead

Sheeted bodies of his father, mother and two sisters lay about Thompson Davis, 17-year-old Cleveland, S. C., boy, as he sat under a tree in the cemetery. His two dead sisters were 12 and 14, and the orphaned youth, who was not in the school when the fire disaster occurred, is left with a 9-months-old brother and three small sisters, two, five and six years old.

Wausau Woman Donates Park Ground to City

Wausau—At a special session the city council was informed officially that Mrs. C. F. Rea is about to present the city with a beautiful park and play ground in the First ward at the intersection of Grand avenue and Stroller's lane.

The park is to be a memorial to the late Benjamin Franklin Hammond, father of Mrs. Rea and one of the pioneer residents and lumbermen of northern Wisconsin who made Wausau his home for many years prior to his death.

The park comprises several lots of high land lying level with Grand avenue and covered with a fine growth of trees. At the rear of the property the ground breaks abruptly into a steep hill leading up from what is known as The Flat. On the south, bordering on Stroller's lane, the ground is also high a stone wall bordering the property and dividing it from the street. This stone wall will be surmounted by an ornamental guard fence as a measure of safety.

The grounds are now being improved under the supervision of a landscape gardener, who has plotted the park [illegible] for [illegible] later.

Vienna—The building of an arena which is to serve for bull fights is nearing completion in the Prater in Vienna. Bull fighting is a sport little known in Austria.

Governor Blaine Urges Renewed Devotion To U. S.

Madison, Wis., May 21—Governor Blaine today proclaimed Memorial Day, May 30 as an occasion which should "arouse and stimulate love of country," in the people of Wisconsin and become a day of "renewed devotion to country for young and old alike." His proclamation follows:

"Memorial day is the legal holiday sacred to the memory of those living and dead, who fought the nation's battles in years past. But for the sacrifices made by those heroes, this nation would have been rent by disunion and might now be beset with domestic discord and strife.

"No such dangers now threaten the United States; but in peace as in war there is need for devotion to country. One may serve his country not only on the battlefield, but also in the peaceful pursuits of every day life. None better exemplify this truth than the veterans of our wars. The veterans of the Civil War were not content with their laurels won in battle, but for decades following Lee's surrender furnished the mark of the nation's leadership both in the industrial and in the political field; and the veterans of the recent World War will, fair to equal this record.

Day Of Renewed Devotion

"Memorial Day provokes thoughts of battle; but yet more it should arouse and stimulate love of country. It was for this land of ours and its ideals that these men and women fought and that some of them sacrificed their lives, their minds, their bodies. With such evidences yet fresh in our memories, this Memorial Day should become a day of renewed devotion to country for young and old alike.

"Therefore, I, John J. Blaine, Governor of Wisconsin, proclaim Wednesday, May 30, A. D. 1923.

"I urge that all citizens join with the patriotic organizations in fitting celebrations of this day. I further urge the observance of the time-honored custom of placing flowers upon the graves of all soldiers. Above all, I urge that thought be given on this day to the ideals of this nation and to its problems.

SOWED SEED FOR OPTIONAL MILITARY DRILL YEARS AGO

AUTHORITIES FORCED DRILL ON SACHTJEN WHILE HE WAS STUDENT AT THE STATE UNIVERSITY YEARS AGO

Madison, Wis.—Boys attending the university next year will not need to shoulder a gun unless they want to.

The seed for the abolition of military drill was sown when the university a number of years ago forced drill on Herman Sachtjen when he came to Madison from the farm to go to school.

Did Not Forget

Sachtjen did not forget his marching across the campus while folks waited for him to come home and milk the cows and started the ball rolling in the assembly where he has been chosen a member by the people of Dane county.

With the assembly voting by a big majority for making drill at school optional the senate on Thursday night also advanced the measure and final action will be taken on Wednesday.

Others Fight Move

President E. A. Birge of the university is one of the opponents of the move for optional training. One of the arguments against the Sachtjen bill is that few students will take military drill if not forced to do so and that the military department at the university will practically go out of existance.

Plan To Build A New Ten Story Hotel At Wausau

Wausau may soon have a new 10-story hotel if plans presented to a number of Wausau men at the Wausau club Wednesday by H. O. Wood, Chris. Schroeder & Sons company of Milwaukee, are carried out.

Wood said the Schroeder company proposes to erect a modern hotel at Wausau to cost from $500,000 to $800,000, similar to those the company has constructed in other cities, including the Hotel Astor, Milwaukee; Hotel Northland, Green Bay; Hotel Wisconsin, Milwaukee, and the Hotel Retlaw, Fond du Lac. A hotel is also planned at Madison.

The aim is to have a chain of hostelries which will provide adequate accommodations, especially for tourists and the traveling public, and Mr. Wood believes Wausau is particularly well located for a hotel of this kind, which would have all the equipment and service found in any large city hotel. Wood said he found sentiment very favorable in Wausau and he believes the project is now assured. Three tentative sites have been selected.

Walter Schroeder, president of the Schroeder company, is in the east but expects to visit Wausau within 10 days, when local backers plan further to develop the project. So far the company has made no financial proposition to the Wausau men, the meeting this week being to determine whether representative men felt the need of another big hotel there. Practically all of the Wausau men appeared to be in favor of the project.

A Policy of Service

AMERICAN industry is on trial today before the American people . . . There are two things which industry must do, and the time to begin is now. First—pursue a definite economic policy which will have the respect and support of the American people, and Second—educate the public to the fact that anything which harms industry harms the people as a whole.

In the first instance, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is operating under a policy of service which merits, and we believe has won, the respect and support of the people throughout the ten Middle Western States served by this company.

This is a progressive policy. Under it this company is progressing. Progress means moving forward. In business it means continual adaptation and re-adaptation to general conditions.

Now business is in the process of adapting itself to bigness. It has found way to regain that personal contact which means understanding—one of these is through frankness about business policies and openness in disclosing facts about the operation of the business.

In the second instance, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has, for several years pursued a policy of complete frankness with the public respecting the part which it plays in the oil industry, and, through this industry, in commercial life generally.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has grown big because the need for its service is great. Successful business tends to bigness. This matter of size is neither a virtue nor a crime. It is one of the inevitable consequences of civilization.

Big tasks await accomplishment today. The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is handling a big job and handling it effectively. This job is growing bigger. This cannot be avoided. The more people, the more automotive machinery, the greater the demand for petroleum products.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has had the foresight to expand with the expanding needs of the people it serves.

First Photographs of the School Fire That Killed 76 at Cleveland, S. C.

Smoking Ruins Where School Victims Died in Fire

First picture taken at the scene of the South Carolina tragedy after bodies of 76 persons had been taken from the smoldering debris. Complete destruction of the schoolhouse is shown, only a few piles of bricks remaining.

Awaiting a 40-foot Grave

Some of the shrouded dead lying in the cemetery after the schoolhouse fire at Cleveland, S. C., most of the bodies being buried in one big community grave measuring 40 feet.

"Topsy Turvy," schoolroom comedy, became a grim tragedy when 76 men, women and children, lost their lives in the fire that swept the little Cleveland, S. C., schoolhouse while commencement exercises were being held.

Two acts of the play had been presented. The audience, consisting of proud mothers, fathers, relatives and friends, was chatting happily about the success of the performance. Backstage the young student actors were receiving the congratulations of their teachers and principal. They were all ready to go with the big scene.

Suddenly one of the oil lamps fell and smashed on the floor of the improvised stage. As it exploded, blazing kerosene splashed on the crowd. Flames licked the flimsy props and the curtains that served as scenery. Child actors tried to stamp them out. But the fire spread too rapidly.

In a twinkling there was a rush for the door—the only way out.

Some succeeded in getting through the narrow hall and down the wooden stairs. But as the crowd jammed on the landing, the weight became too great; and the stairs collapsed.

Some were impaled on the jagged bits of banister left standing; others were crushed by the bodies of those falling on top of them; most were burned.

A few leaped from the second-story windows. But most of those who perished were trapped in the rooms where they sat.

Efforts of those who escaped to aid those still in the building were, for the most part, fruitless. Several fathers who reached the open and returned to seek their children who had been on the stage, were burned to death trying to rescue them.

How Fire Occurred

Boy Mourner With His Shrouded Dead

Sheeted bodies of his father, mother and two sisters lay about Thompson Davis, 17-year-old Cleveland, S. C., boy, as he sat under a tree in the cemetery. His two dead sisters were 12 and 14, and the orphaned youth, who was not in the school when the fire disaster occurred, is left with a 9-months-old brother and three small sisters, two, five and six years old.

Wausau Woman Donates Park Ground to City

Wausau—At a special session the city council was informed officially that Mrs. C. F. Rea is about to present the city with a beautiful park and play ground in the First ward at the intersection of Grand avenue and Stroller's lane.

The park is to be a memorial to the late Benjamin Franklin Hammond, father of Mrs. Rea and one of the pioneer residents and lumbermen of northern Wisconsin who made Wausau his home for many years prior to his death.

The park comprises several lots of high land lying level with Grand avenue and covered with a fine growth of trees. At the rear of the property the ground breaks abruptly into a steep hill leading up from what is known as The Flat. On the south, bordering on Stroller's lane, the ground is also high a stone wall bordering the property and dividing it from the street. This stone wall will be surmounted by an ornamental guard fence as a measure of safety.

The grounds are now being improved under the supervision and as planned by Charles H. Rundell, Minneapolis, landscape architect. A number of the trees are being removed, walks are being laid and a bandstand will be built. There will be a drinking fountain, masses of shrubbery and playgrounds for children.

Governor Blaine Urges Renewed Devotion To U. S.

Madison, Wis., May 21—Governor Blaine today proclaimed Memorial Day, May 30 as an occasion which should "arouse and stimulate love of country," in the people of Wisconsin and become a day of "renewed devotion to country for young and old alike. His proclamation follows:

"Memorial day is the legal holiday sacred to the memory of those living and dead who fought the nation's battles in years past. But for the sacrifices made by those heroes, this nation would have been rent by disunion and might now be beset with domestic discord and strife.

"No such dangers now threaten the United States; but in peace as in war there is need for devotion to country. One may serve his country not only on the battlefield, but also in the peaceful pursuits of every day life. None better exemplify this truth than the veterans of our wars. The veterans of the Civil War were not content with their laurels won in battle, but for decades following Lee's surrender furnished the bulk of the nation's leadership both in the industrial and in the political field; and the veterans of the recent World War bid fair to equal this record.

Day Of Renewed Devotion

"Memorial Day provokes thoughts of battle; but yet more it should arouse and stimulate love of country. It was for this land of ours and its ideals that these men and women fought and that some of them sacrificed their lives, their minds, their bodies. With such evidences yet fresh in our memories, this Memorial Day should become a day of renewed devotion to country for young and old alike.

"Therefore, I, John J. Blaine, Governor of Wisconsin, proclaim Wednesday, May 30, A. D. 1923.

"I urge that all citizens join with the patriotic organizations in fitting celebrations of this day. I further urge the observance of the time-honored custom of placing flowers upon the graves of all soldiers. Above all, I urge that thought be given on this day to the ideals of this nation and to its problems."

SOWED SEED FOR OPTIONAL MILITARY DRILL YEARS AGO

AUTHORITIES FORCED DRILL ON SACHTJEN WHILE HE WAS STUDENT AT THE STATE UNIVERSITY YEARS AGO

Madison, Wis.—Boys attending the university next year will not need to shoulder a gun unless they want to.

The seed for the abolition of military drill was sown when the university a number of years ago forced drill on Herman Sachtjen when he came to Madison from the farm to go to school.

Did Not Forget

Sachtjen did not forget his marching across the campus while folks waited for him to come home and milk the cows and started the ball rolling in the assembly where he has been chosen a member by the people of Dane county.

With the assembly voting by a big majority for making drill at school optional the senate on Thursday night also advanced the measure and final action will be taken on Wednesday.

Others Fight Move

President E. A. Birge of the university is one of the opponents of the move for optional training. One of the arguments against the Sachtjen bill is that few students will take military drill if not forced to do so and that the military department at the university will practically go out of existance.

Plan To Build A New Ten Story Hotel At Wausau

Wausau may soon have a new 10-story hotel if plans presented to a number of Wausau men at the Wausau club Wednesday by H. O. Wood, Chris. Schroeder & Sons company of Milwaukee, are carried out.

Wood said the Schroeder company proposes to erect a modern hotel at Wausau to cost from $600,000 to $800,000, similar to those the company has constructed in other cities, including the Hotel Astor, Milwaukee; Hotel Northland, Green Bay; Hotel Wisconsin, Milwaukee, and the Hotel Retlaw, Fond du Lac. A hotel is also planned at Madison.

The aim is to have a chain of hostelries which will provide adequate accommodations, especially for tourists and the traveling public, and Mr. Wood believes Wausau is particularly well located for a hotel of this kind, which would have all the equipment and service found in any large city hotel. Wood said he found sentiment very favorable in Wausau and he believes the project is now assured. Three tentative sites have been selected.

Walter Schroeder, president of the Schroeder company, is in the east but expects to visit Wausau within 10 days, when local backers plan further to develop the project. So far the company has made no financial proposition to the Wausau men, the meeting this week being to determine whether representative men felt the need of another big hotel there. Practically all of the Wausau men appeared to be in favor of the project.

A Policy of Service

AMERICAN industry is on trial today before the American people . . . There are two things which industry must do, and the time to begin is now. First—pursue a definite economic policy which will have the respect and support of the American people, and Second—educate the public to the fact that anything which harms industry harms the people as a whole.

In the first instance, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is operating under a policy of service which merits, and we believe has won, the respect and support of the people throughout the ten Middle Western States served by this company.

This is a progressive policy. Under it this company is progressing. Progress means moving forward. In business it means continual adaptation and re-adaptation to general conditions.

Now business is in the process of adapting itself to bigness. It has found ways to regain that personal contact which means understanding—one of these is through frankness about business policies and openness in disclosing facts about the operation of the business.

In the second instance, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has, for several years, pursued a policy of complete frankness with the public respecting the part which it plays in the oil industry, and, through this industry, in commercial life generally.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has grown big because the need for its service is great. Successful business tends to bigness. This matter of size is neither a virtue nor a crime it is one of the inevitable consequences of civilization.

Big tasks await accomplishment to-day. The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is handling a big job and handling it effectively. This job is growing bigger. This cannot be avoided. The more people, the more automotive machinery, the greater the demand for petroleum products.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has had the foresight to expand with the expanding needs of the people it serves.

THE OLD HOME TOWN BY STANLEY

AUNT SARAH PEABODY WHO HAS SOME SET IDEAS ABOUT DRESS, STEPPED INTO AN ARGUMENT ON LOWER MAIN STREET LATE TODAY.

"You ain't thinkin' of leavin' here 'fore mornin', are you?" Buck demanded.

"Si Senor, I go at once."

"No you're not, querida." Bodine used the term of endearment with assured familiarity. "I risked my neck gettin' the kid out of danger for you, and you ain't giin' to pay me back by refusin' my hospitality."

"But I want to go." Mercedes repeated anxiously as Buck tried to induce her to take a seat.

"Let's get down to cases," Buck answered her. "There's no use beatin' round the bush. I been sweet on you ever since I first clamped my eyes on you. You knew it, too, and you gave me the lowdown every time. But that's all right. I like a woman with some scrap in her. You've got nerve enough to match my own. That's why I'm strong for you. I swore I'd get you some day, and I'm going to make good. I didn't bring your kid brother here for nothin'."

"Stop—stop, please," Mercedes begged.

Her nearness to him drove Buck mad with desire. She was even more lovely than he had supposed.

"Why, querida," he said fervently, "there ain't a thing I've got, I wouldn't give you. I got water on this place again. It's worth somethin' now. But I ain't a rancher. I'd throw up this thing in a minute for you. There ain't no real money in ranching, nohow. I'll take you where there's some life and excitement. This God-forsaken desert ain't no place for a girl like you."

"You mean that you want me to go with you—?" Mercedes could not believe her ears.

"Yes. I'll even marry you, if you'll come with me," Buck replied.

The girl before him shook her head hopelessly. The man must be mad.

"Well, what do you say?" he demanded.

"I say no!" Mercedes cried. She put a chair between them as Buck advanced toward her. The look in his eyes was proof enough of his intention. He wanted to take her in his arms and feel her warm flesh against his whether she would have it or not.

"You have trapped me!" she exclaimed. "I do not believe my brother is here at all."

"He's here all right," Bodine assured her. "Hey, Shorty," he called.

"Yep," came the muffled answer from the next room.

"Wake that kid up!"

The girl heard Basilio's startled cry as Shorty awakened him.

"You beast!" Mercedes shrieked. "Let me have him! Let me have him!"

"Not till you say yes to me, Senorita."

"You coward! No wonder you want to run away. Senor Acklin will send you to prison for blowing up his dam."

"Yeh?" Buck questioned exasperatingly. "Esteban will go with me, too, won't he?" In a changed tone he went on: "You followed us into the hills this afternoon: I knew that long ago. What else you've found out, I don't know, and I don't care."

He disproved this last statement by immediately asking:

"Have you seen Acklin?"

Mercedes caught a hint of uneasiness in his voice.

"I have," she answered.

"Humph! I suppose you told him all you knew?" The big fellow's tones were threatening.

Mercedes saw her advantage.

"I tell him nothing!" she cried. "But I will if you do not give me Basilio and let me take him home."

Buck reached out his long arms and caught her around the waist. Mercedes fought to get free, but he was too strong for her.

"Now you change your mind in a hurry, or I'll make you." He raised his voice. "Give that kid's arm a twist or two." Then he continued to the girl: "I'll show you who's boss here."

Shorty more than obeyed Buck's order. Basilio let out a succession of shrieks, as the brute twisted his arm until the tender bones were almost snapping.

"Stop!" Mercedes cried so loudly that her voice carried to Kildare, who was still some distance down the road. "Stop!" she called out again.

"Maybe you'll listen to reason now," Buck grumbled.

He caught her by the wrist as he spoke and drew her closer to him. Mercedes beat his face with her free hand. But his jaw was impervious to her light blows. With feline ferocity she bared her nails then, and ripped his cheeks until they were smeared with blood. Bodine did not release her, however.

"You fightin' wildcat," he mumbled through gritted teeth. "I'll kiss you if it kills me."

Try as hard as she might, Mercedes could not hold him off. His cruel, sensuous mouth drew close to her own. To add to her horror, Basilio shrieked again and again. She redoubled efforts to get free. Bodine pinioned her arms against her hips. She felt something sharp ripping her sleeve. It was Buck's revolver. Automatically her fingers closed upon it. With a wrench she pulled out of the holster. Bodine felt the gun barrel boring into his stomach. His face grew white.

"Get back!" Mercedes gasped. "En seguida! Al momento! or you die here!"

Buck backed away. He knew she meant what she said. His rifle stood in the corner. He retreated toward it. The way to the door between the two rooms were clear now. Mercedes ran to it and flung it open.

Shorty sat on the bed beside Basilio, the child's arms still held in his big hands. A smokey wall lamp revealed him in all the ugliness. But if he saw the girl, he did not show it. His grip on the child did not relax either. Mercedes cried out for him to let go of her brother: she raised her gun to compel him. But fear such as she could never inspire in him held Shorty in its grasp. He had caught sight of Blaze peering through the open window.

Mercedes saw only the man and child in front of her. Shorty's rigidity turned with incredible swiftness to most violent action. He dropped his arm and brought it up with a gun in his hand so quickly that it surpassed belief.

But Kildare had been more rapid than he. Shorty's gun came up, and up, and up, as Mercedes watched, spellbound. It seemed that it was pointing at her. Her fingers twitched, and her own gun barked.

Kildare saw the play: the girl at the door, her gun raised: Shorty's pistol leaping into action: the frantic child struggling to throw off the iron hand on his arm. But more poignant than anything else was the glitter in Shorty's eyes. Blaze knew he was the man's target, not the girl. His gun was in his hand. A tightening of the lips and his automatic spat forth its deadly message.

He saw Mercedes' gun flash. The report of it smothered his own. Only a split-second of time, that words fail to express, had intervened between the two shots. So close had they been that neither the girl nor Bodine in the next room realized two guns had spoken.

Buck rushed to where the girl stood staring open-mouthed at the man on the bed. For a second, it seemed, Shorty hung poised in the air. His face was set, an unearthly light in his eyes. And then, with a thud, he crashed to the floor dead.

Kildare had not waited for a second look. He drew away from the window and picked up the empty shell from his gun. He threw it into the creek. Why he did this was not plain to him at the time. In some way, he knew, Shorty's death might be turned to his advantage. But how? How? He tried to whip his mind into helping him. He felt no regret over killing the man. It was part of the debt he had come to square. Acklin would be here in a few runutes. It was almost dawn. How could he twist this thing so that it would halt the Big Boss.

Blaze caught sight of a man approaching on horseback. He had been there only a second or two. Kildare drew back into the shadows lurking about the house.

Bodine was looking up at Mercedes from where he knelt beside the body.

"You killed him all right," Blaze heard him say. "He's plumb dead. What you goin' to do now?" "Who's goin' to the pen? This state's no place for you. Say, I guess you'll be glad to beat it with me. You wait! I'll get a couple of fresh horses and we'll hit it for Oregon on the jump."

"Throw up your hands!"

Bodine looked around. In the doorway stood the Big Boss.

CHAPTER XXXIII
Gather of the Clans

BODINE stared speechlessly at Acklin. Shorty's sudden death and Mercedes' maddening influence had destroyed Buck's boastful pose. He had been prepared earlier in the evening for the advent of Morrow or some lesser light in the Double A constellation. But at no time had he dreamed that Acklin himself would come single handed to beard him in his own den.

The Big Boss walked across the kitchen to the doorway of the room in which Shorty lay. As Buck recovered from the daze he was in, he finnally managed to articulate:

"I ain't armed!"

"Take your hands down then," Acklin snapped. "Back into the center of that room."

Bodine retreated as he was ordered, facing the other man as he stepped backward. The big cattleman kept pace with him. A movement near the window to which Mercedes had stepped with Basilio stopped him in his tracks. His gun was in position as he wheeled, but he dropped it in consternation as he recognized the girl and child.

Hatred flamed in Acklin's eyes. Finding her here with Bodine was a staggering blow to his vanity. He had overheard Buck's words going together!

THE OLD HOME TOWN — BY STANLEY

"You ain't thinkin' of leavin' here 'fore mornin', are you?" Buck demanded.

"Si Senor, I go at once."

"No you're not, querida." Bodine used the term of endearment with assured familiarity. "I risked my neck gettin' the kid out of danger for you, and you ain't giin' to pay me back by refusin' my hospitality."

"But I want to go," Mercedes repeated anxiously as Buck tried to induce her to take a seat.

"Let's get down to cuses," Buck answered her. "There's no use beatin' round the bush. I been sweet on you ever since I first clamped my eyes on you. You knew it, too, and you gave me the lowdown every time. But that's all right. I like a woman with some scrap in her. You've got nerve enough to match my own. That's why I'm strong for you. I swore I'd get you some day, and I'm going to make good. I didn't bring your kid brother here for nothin'."

"Stop—stop, please," Mercedes begged.

Her nearness to him drove Buck mad with desire. She was even more lovely than he had supposed.

"Why, querida," he said fervently, "there ain't a thing I've got, I wouldn't give you. I got water on this place again. It's worth somethin' now. But I ain't a rancher. I'd throw up this thing in a minute for you. There ain't no real money in ranching, nohow. I'll take you where there's some life and excitement. This God-forsaken desert ain't no place for a girl like you."

"You mean that you want me to go with you—?" Mercedes could not believe her ears.

"Yes, I'll even marry you, if you'll come with me," Buck replied.

The girl before him shook her head hopelessly. The man must be mad.

"Well, what do you say?" he demanded.

"I say no!" Mercedes cried. She put a chair between them as Buck advanced toward her. The look in his eyes was proof enough of his intention. He wanted to take her in his arms and feel her warm flesh against his whether she would have it or not.

"You have trapped me!" she exclaimed. "I do not believe my brother is here at all."

"He's here all right," Bodine assured her. "Hey, Shorty," he called.

"Yep," came the muffled answer from the next room.

"Wake that kid up!"

The girl heard Basilio's startled cry as Shorty awakened him.

"You beast!" Mercedes shrieked. "Let me have him! Let me have him!"

"Not till you say yes to me, Senorita."

"You coward! No wonder you want to run away. Senor Acklin will send you to prison for blowing up his dam."

"Yeh?" Buck questioned exasperatingly. "Esteban will go with me, too, won't he?" In a changed tone he went on: "You followed us into the hills this afternoon; I knew that long ago. What else you've found out, I don't know, and I don't care."

He disproved this last statement by immediately asking:

"Have you seen Acklin?"

Mercedes caught a hint of uneasiness in his voice.

"I have," she answered.

"Humph! I suppose you told him all you knew?" The big fellow's tones where threatening.

Mercedes saw her advantage.

I tell him nothing!" she cried. "But I will if you do not give me Basilio and let me take him home."

Buck reached out his long arms and caught her around the waist. Mercedes fought to get free, but he was too strong for her.

"Now you change your mind in a hurry, or I'll make you." He raised his voice. "Give that kid's arm a twist or two." Then he continued to the girl: "I'll show you who's boss here."

Shorty more than obeyed Buck's order. Basilio let out a succession of shrieks, as the brute twisted his arm until the tender bones were almost snapping.

"Stop!" Mercedes cried so loudly that her voice carried to Kildare, who was still some distance down the road. "Stop!" she called out again.

"Maybe you'll listen to reason now," Buck grumbled.

He caught her by the wrist as he spoke and drew her closer to him. Mercedes beat his face with her free hand. But his jaw was impervious to her light blows. With feline ferocity she bared her nails then, and ripped his cheeks until they were smeared with blood. Bodine did not release her, however.

"You fightin' wildcat," he mumbled through gritted teeth, "I'll kiss you if it kills me."

Try as hard as she might, Mercedes could not hold him off. His cruel, sensuous mouth drew close to her own. To add to her horror, Basilio shrieked again and again. She redoubled efforts to get free. Bodine pinioned her arms against her hips. She felt something sharp ripping her sleeve. It was Buck's revolver. Automatically her fingers closed upon it. With a wrench she pulled out of the holster. Bodine felt the gun barrel boring into his stomach. His face grew white.

"Get back!" Mercedes gasped. "En seguida! Al momento! or you die here!"

Buck backed away. He knew she meant what she said. His rifle stood in the corner. He retreated toward it. The way to the door between the two rooms were clear now. Mercedes ran to it and flung it open.

Shorty sat on the bed beside Basilio, the child's arms still held in his big hands. A smokey wall lamp revealed him in all the ugliness. But if he saw the girl, he did not show it. His grip on the child did not relax either. Mercedes cried out for him to let go of her brother; she raised her gun to compel him. But fear such as she could never inspire in him held Shorty in its grasp. He had caught sight of Blaze peering through the open window.

Mercedes saw only the man and child in front of her. Shorty's rigidity turned with incredible swiftness to most violent action. He dropped his arm and brought it up with a gun in his hand so quickly that it surpassed belief.

But Kildare had been more rapid than he. Shorty's gun came up, and up, and up, as Mercedes watched, spellbound. It seemed that it was pointing at her. Her fingers twitched, and her own gun barked.

Kildare saw the play; the girl at the door, her gun raised; Shorty's pistol leaping into action; the frantic child struggling to throw off the iron hand on his arm. But more poignant than anything else was the glitter in Shorty's eyes. Blaze knew he was the man's target, not the girl. His gun was in his hand. A tightening of the lips and his automatic spat forth its deadly message.

He saw Mercedes' gun flash. The report of it smothered his own. Only a split-second of time, that words fail to express, had intervened between the two shots. So close had they been that neither the girl nor Bodine in the next room realized two guns had spoken.

Buck rushed to where the girl stood staring open-mouthed at the man on the bed. For a second, it seemed, Shorty hung poised in the air. His face was set, an unearthly light in his eyes. And then, with a thud, he crashed to the floor dead.

Kildare had not waited for a second look. He drew away from the window and picked up the empty shell from his gun. He threw it into the creek. Why he did this was not plain to him at the time. In some way, he knew, Shorty's death might be turned to his advantage. But how?. How? He tried to whip his mind into helping him. He felt no regret over killing the man. It was part of the debt he had come to square. Acklin would be here in a few minutes. It was almost dawn.. How could he twist this thing so that it would halt the Big Boss

Blaze caught sight of a man approaching on horseback. He had been there only a second or two, Kildare drew back into the shadows lurking about the house.

Bodine was looking up at Mercedes from where he knelt beside the body.

"You killed him all right," Blaze heard him say. "He's plumb dead. What you goin' to do now?" "Who's goin' to the pen? This state's no place for you. Say, I guess you'll be glad to beat it with me. You wait! I'll get a couple of fresh horses and we'll hit it for Oregon on the jump."

"Throw up your hands!"

Bodine looked around. In the doorway stood the Big Boss.

CHAPTER XXXIII
Gather of the Clans

BODINE stared speechlessly at Acklin. Shorty's sudden death and Mercedes' maddening influence had destroyed Buck's boastful pose. He had been prepared earlier in the evening for the advent of Morrow or some lesser light in the Double A constellation. But at no time had he dreamed that Acklin himself would come single handed to beard him in his own den.

The Big Boss walked across the kitchen to the doorway of the room in which Shorty lay. As Buck recovered from the daze he was in, he finally managed to articulate:

"I ain't armed!"

"Take your hands down then," Acklin snapped. "Back into the center of that room."

Bodine retreated as he was ordered, facing the other man as he stepped backward. The big cattleman kept pace with him. A movement near the window to which Mercedes had stepped with Basilio stopped him in his tracks. His gun was in position as he wheeled, but he dropped it in consternation as he recognized the girl and child.

Hatred flamed in Acklin's eyes. Finding her here with Bodine was a staggering blow to his vanity. He had overheard Buck's words going together!

Tax And Highway Problems To Be Settled This Week

FRIENDS OF BLAINE'S TAX BILL WANT TO REACH AGREEMENTS ON AMENDMENTS; TO COMPROMISE ON ROAD BILLS

Madison, Wis. May 21.—The two big problems of the legislature will probably be settled this week in the senate. With no reason for delay the upper house will face final votes on the Blaine taxation bill and on the highway problem.

Blaine friends were using every effort to get agreements on amendments here today with the hope that the Governor's bill might be pushed through the assembly for the senate. There are some indications, however, that the assembly may not wait for the senate to take action on the Blaine tax bill. The Dahl bill is pending before the assembly. Some time ago this bill was engrossed by a large vote and leaders of the lower house who are demanding reforms may now take up the Dahl bill and put it thru.

That Governor Blaine intends to adhere to his stand of dealing appropriation bills unless financed by other means than a mill tax is becoming more evident each day. The Governor has had prepared a statement showing the operating expenses of the state and will use this as his criterion in forcing down the tax levy.

Whether the tax situation is solved in the senate this week will have much to do with the length of the present legislative session. Should the senate agree on a tax bill, there is every probability that the session may be brought to a close about the middle of June. If there is a disagreement on the taxation measure the probability is that the session may drift along into July before the tax problem can find its ultimate solution.

Friends of Governor Blaine here declared that the executive will sign a sur-tax bill in order to meet the situation if it becomes necessary. The business interest in the state has been uniformly opposed to the sur-tax plan on the ground that it was not a stable method of taxation.

The senate has also before it this week the big highway bills of the session. The committee bills on this subject were killed in the senate last week but has been revised on motions of reconsideration and will be taken up again about Thursday. The crux of the highway problem is over the amount of money which shall be returned to the cities from automobile license fees. The municipalities are making a drive to secure a portion of the license fee fund. The claim is made that automobile traffic is increasing so much in cities that the burden is becoming too heavy for tax payers unless a part of the street construction can be relived. The Polakowski bill which is still pending before the senate is designed to lift the burden from the cities. The committee bills which were defeated last week would turn practically all of the aid to rural communities. A compromise on this situation will probably be worked out some time this week.

Tax And Highway Problems To Be Settled This Week

FRIENDS OF BLAINE'S TAX BILL WANT TO REACH AGREEMENTS ON AMENDMENTS; TO COMPROMISE ON ROAD BILLS

Madison, Wis. May 21.—The two big problems of the legislature will probably be settled this week in the senate. With no reason for delay the upper house will face final votes on the Blaine taxation bill and on the highway problem.

Blaine friends were using every effort to get agreements on amendments here today with the hope that the Governor's bill might be pushed through the assembly for the senate. There are some indications, however, that the assembly may not wait for the senate to take action on the Blaine tax bill. The Dahl bill is pending before the assembly. Some time ago this bill was engrossed by a large vote and leaders of the lower house who are demanding reforms may now take up the Dahl bill and put it thru.

That Governor Blaine intends to adhere to his stand of dealing appropriation bills unless financed by other means than a mill tax is becoming more evident each day. The Governor has had prepared a statement showing the operating expenses of the state and will use this as his criterion in forcing down the tax levy.

Whether the tax situation is solved in the senate this week will have much to do with the length of the present legislative session. Should the senate agree on a tax bill, there is every probability that the session may be brought to a close about the middle of June. If there is a disagreement on the taxation measure the probability is that the session may drift along into July before the tax problem can find its ultimate solution.

Friends of Governor Blaine here declared that the executive will sign a sur-tax bill in order to meet the situation if it becomes necessary. The business interest in the state has been uniformly opposed to the sur-tax plan on the ground that it was not a stable method of taxation.

The senate has also before it this week the big highway bills of the session. The committee bills on this subject were killed in the senate last week but has been revised on motions of reconsideration and will be taken up again about Thursday. The crux of the highway problem is over the amount of money which shall be returned to the cities from automobile license fees. The municipalities are making a drive to secure a portion of the license fee fund. The claim is made that automobile traffic is increasing so much in cities that the burden is becoming too heavy for tax payers unless a part of the street construction can be relived. The Polakowski bill which is still pending before the senate is designed to lift the burden from the cities. The committee bills which were defeated last week would turn practically all of the aid to rural communities. A compromise on this situation will probably be worked out some time this week.

Warsaw Movies Close

Warsaw—Movie tickets in Warsaw are taxed 100 per cent, and as a protest to the authorities all the movie houses recently got together and closed. The government is losing 20,000,000 Polish marks a day as a result.

The authorities came back with an order on the movie men to reopen at once, or have their premises confiscated for use as schools. Public opinion, however, is with the picture men, and it is believed the dispute will be compromised.

Feels 20 Yrs. Younger Since Taking Tanlac

Troubles Piled Up Until it Was Hard Sledding for Him, Declares Moomau—Now Eats Hearty and Sleeps Like Top

"Praising Tanlac is a hobby with my father, and I am now running him a close second for since I took the medicine on his advice I feel twenty years younger," declared John W. Mooman, 732 33rd. St., Milwaukee Wis., expert motor mechanic and active member of the M. W. A.

My digestion got all out of gear, my appetite was so lax my meals were not half what they should be, and I lost my usual strength and energy. Sourness and gas on my stomach distressed me, it was all I could do to drag through my work and I couldn't get a good night's sleep. I was nervous, dizzy, depressed, and my troubles piled up till it was pretty hard sleeping.

"Since taking the Tanlac treatment I eat heartily, my food all agrees with me and I can sleep like a top. Rush jobs always find me equal to them, and I never miss a chance to recommend Tanlac."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 37-million bottles sold.—Adv.
